Piotr Ciski appointed managing director of Cybercom Poland

Piotr Ciski has been named new MD for Cybercom's operations in Poland. His most recent position was MD of Polish operations for Computaris, the British IT consultancy.

"Cybercom aims to be a local player on the Polish market. We have initiated a series of activities to gradually broaden our Polish customer base," says Patrik Boman, president and CEO of the Cybercom Group. "We see good potential for the Polish market. Our operation is solid and developing well, and we are well staffed with talented employees. We have gone through a recruiting process to find a CEO who can manage and further develop our operations. I'm convinced that Piotr, with his strong local connections and experience in managing a large organisation, will develop Cybercom Poland well."

Piotr Ciski is 33 and holds a degree in information systems science. Since 2003, Piotr has been MD of Computaris Poland and a member of Computaris's Group management. Previously, Piotr held management and sales roles within the company. Piotr is experienced in system integration and software development for telecom companies and operators in Europe, the Middle East, and Asia.

"This is a fun, stimulating, challenging assignment," says Ciski. "I'm delighted to have received this appointment, and I look forward to beginning my new role as MD and to further developing the company."

Cybercom Poland focuses on selected technologies, and its major customers include Ericsson, Nokia Siemens, and Telenor. It has 87 employees and offices in Warsaw and Lodz.
